Here in California

Personal evangelism has been a distinctive of Christians in Action since it's founding in 1957. In February, CinA combined forces with Christian Farmers during an outreach event at the World Ag Expo which is held annually here in Central California. In this picture staff members are "in action" witnessing to small groups gathered around. Beth Konold in the foreground; Paul Chandran from India standing behind her; former CinA missionary Bobby Mendoza background left; and CinA supporter, Kelly Fox, background right. Other staff members and former staff members were involved as well.

Paul Chandran, CinA missionary in India, was invited to be the main speaker at the Missionary Conference at Central Christian Church in Lancaster, California. Linda Toledo, pictured with her display of the CinA works in Central America, was one of the daytime speakers. The conference was entitled Faith under Fire, the Persecuted Church.

Restoration Outreach Christian Center (ROCC Church) in Fresno invited CinA to help with evangelism as food was given to families living in the area around the church.

Bob Spencer gives some Gospel food to young men and teens who are waiting for some regular food.

Teresa Himden (CinA alum) shares the Good News of Jesus in Spanish, while Dave Konold shares with another family. Moms with young children came with strollers, and people lined up in their cars.

This mother and her children were waiting in the car while the dad picked up food items. Alan Hiatt seized the moment to give this family spiritual food that will last forever.
