

Dear Prayer Partner,

We first met “A” on a cold morning as she carefully folded her bedding and personal belongings, placing them into her cart. Another time she sat on the stone sidewalk, shivering and wrapped in blankets. We took her some hot coffee and she said, “Yesterday someone gave me money. I bought coffee for a few friends who needed it more than I did.

What I did has come back to me!” Each time we saw her, “A” was hesitant to share in spiritual matters and reluctant to come near the mission in the day time. We didn’t see her for a few weeks and then she appeared at the mission, in need of some personal items. We saw her quite frequently after that. Then this week she came in and said, “I’m here for the Bible study”!

A Poet on the Street

Few were at the courtyard where we usually meet a crowd, as a noisy machine made it impossible to hold a conversation. So Joy gave a Gospel booklet to “J,” which he started reading as we left. He came running after us on the street! “Do you want to hear my poem?” Of course we did! As he recited it to us, it was obvious that though he felt sad about his situation, he had taken responsibility for it. Not long ago he lived at home with his wife. Things changed drastically, too fast for him to grasp. Now he lives on the streets. “J” wants to hear about Jesus but is not yet ready to accept what He can do for him.

Please Pray for:

- The CinA booth and table at the Good Friday Breakfast—that people will respond to the call of service around the world.

- That we will find more openings to present opportunities for ministry with Christians in Action.
- Preparations for the summer events in Portland and that we’ll meet the requirements for Sunday Parkways.
- Maximum participation in the short-term ministries listed at right, and many new disciples for the Lord.
- A suitable venue for Mission ConneXion 2013. The steering committee of which we’re a part is searching for a larger location due to the increasing attendance and need for more seminar classrooms.
- “A” and “J” and the many others we meet on the streets and at the Rescue Mission, to trust in Christ and learn how to live productive lives for Him.

Thank you
